Building Teens Up With Breakfast

In 2002, YFC Youth Unlimited opened its Maple Ridge division. A faith-based youth organization with a mandate to work in the public setting, Youth Unlimited Greater Vancouver runs many different programs including drop in centres, skate board clubs, teen mom programs, prevention and education, and many others that commit to seeing teens become whole. Specifically focused on marginalized, vulnerable teens, Youth Unlimited walked into the Maple Ridge community knowing that the school system was a great way to engage these youth.

Dennis Hemminger, Maple Ridge Area Supervisor for Youth Unlimited, has been with the organization for 15 years. “There’s a fantastic statistic that says if a teenager has one adult who will walk with them through their teen years, their success increases five fold. We see that we fit here,” he explains.

Youth Unlimited began outreach in the school system and one thing they heard time and again was that kids were coming to school hungry. They didn’t have the means to obtain breakfast and sometimes wouldn’t come to school because of this. Hemminger started making connections. He knew churches that wanted to support work in the community, but didn’t know where to begin – and that’s how it started.

In 2009 the program began with one school. With the help of the Maple Ridge Community Foundation and other supporters, it expanded to its fifth location in 2015. The breakfast program runs weekly at five high schools in school district 42. Each school program is paired up for sponsorship from a local church, both financially and by way of volunteers. Volunteers, who make this program possible to run in multiple locations, include those from the church sponsor, parents of other students, and students who want to give back by serving or cleaning up.

Youth Unlimited’s mandate for this program is to feed hungry kids, and work alongside the counsellors and school staff to get those kids there. The benefits, Hemminger explains, include getting the kids to school on time – a challenge he describes as especially difficult for some teens living in the margins. He also notes an alertness noticed by teachers, counsellors and youth workers. “It’s one of those unquantifiable things in life,” he says, “but it’s there.”

Beautiful scenery, plentiful amenities, community spirit. All these things and more make us proud to serve the people of Maple Ridge. Perhaps the most special thing about Maple Ridge is its residents. In our latest marketing campaign, launched in late 2015, we introduce neighbours to neighbours. As we celebrate 40 years of service, we celebrate the people of this community.

Treasurer's Report

As our great community of Maple Ridge continues to grow, demands for more grants and further investment from our Foundation increase as well. In order to manage the annual budget and plan for the future, our goal is to increase these funds from $800,000 to $1,000,000 in 2016. By increasing our permanent endowment funds we will be better able to meet the educational, cultural, and physical needs of the community, and to continue improving the lives of local residents.

We plan on achieving this financial goal by way of the Legacy Campaign, in line with our 40th Anniversary in 2016. As we grow the Foundation's funds, we will work with our Investment Advisors who will help ensure good fiscal health, as well as administer funds for the operational and investment objectives.

Your contributions support profound change for the individuals and non-profit organizations in our community, and we are counting on them to help us achieve these goals.

Preserving Local History

The Maple Ridge Historical Society received a very large collection of negatives and prints, covering all of the Maple Ridge Pitt Meadows Times' photography from 1985 to 2002. Val Patenaude, of MRHS, explained, "This is a huge organizational project, to sort through all of these images! What a special undertaking, though, to preserve these important pieces of our community's history in a modern, efficient way. I'm honoured that we get to be a part of it. Though the 1980's and 1990's may not feel particularly historic now, they will soon. We are collecting these now, to preserve for the future."

In November 2015, Maple Ridge Community Foundation granted $1,500 to the Maple Ridge Historical Society. These funds helped to purchase a quality negative to digital scanner, ensuring the society had the most productive tools to complete their project.

funding from the Maple Ridge Community Foundation has subsidized the money we receive from the churches, committing sustainability to this important program. It has also helped us increase capacity over the years,” says Hemminger, “In 2015 we expanded to the alternate school, Connex, and we plan to expand further in 2016.”

For the Youth Unlimited team, it’s so much more than simply providing a nourishing meal. It is one way for them to begin building relationships with those students who need a helping hand. This is one introduction to them, where they can get to know their journey and to inspire them to keep going. Their goal is to be there to do what they can to see that students get what they need in life. At some schools they supervise games rooms at lunchtime, or get involved in other clubs. They get their hands dirty, literally; once a week Hemminger washes dishes at one of the school’s cafeterias.

Hemminger enjoys recounting a story of a tremendous breakfast program success. A young lady was an early arrival at her high school, mainly because she needed to get out of her house as soon as possible. She sat in the hallways and didn’t acknowledge many people. Some of the program’s volunteers eventually convinced her to join them for breakfast, where she eventually became a regular. Their rapport grew to an invitation to help prepare and serve, and this young lady is now a consistent volunteer who has invited other students to volunteer. She has taken on a leadership role and the Youth Unlimited team counts on her opinions when it comes to the mechanics of the breakfast mornings. From no contact to leadership within two year! Breakfast, encouraging workers and our extraordinary volunteers made it so.

Youth Unlimited has received four grants from MRCF, all of which have helped facilitate an expansion to their breakfast program each year. “The Hemminger keeps in touch with many graduated students, and enjoys the opportunity to offer support in different areas of their lives. One breakfast club connection is a young man who Dennis helped move into his own place last year, and meets for coffee regularly to keep in touch, discuss budgeting, and other important life aspects.

“We understand that part of our job is to connect outside of the school, after hours, on the weekend. We get to build these important lasting relationships that way. One great kid even borrowed my car for their road test, and crashed it!” he adds with a chuckle.

The Maple Ridge Community Foundation has one annual deadline for receiving grant applications, which is the 2nd Friday of October. Learn more about MRCF’s granting opportunities at mrcf.ca.

The Maple Ridge Community Foundation reflects on 2015 as a year of transition, progress and commitment. Our President of 9 years, Robert Prince, retired, and another respected board member, Lori Graham, also moved on. It was our pleasure to welcome Roger Cummings, Ernie Daykin and Bart Findlay as new Directors. They are valued additions to our team, and have already offered excellent support and vision.

With contributions from our Maple Ridge business community and residents, we continue to grant much-needed funds to organizations working hard to make a difference.
